

Palliative Services

The Palliative Medicine Service offers patients and their next-of-kin (NOK) the support to improve a patient's quality of life. The team also helps patients and their NOK cope with a patient's terminal or life-threatening disease.

A multi-disciplinary team cares for patients and comprises palliative medicine specialists, specialty nurses and allied health professionals. Together, they manage and optimise a patient's end-of-life care.

Patients experiencing pain and other physical symptoms can benefit from the psychosocial, emotional and spiritual support offered.

We also partner community-based services, home hospice services and inpatient hospice units to care for and offer bereavement support to families.

Palliative services are offered as inpatient and outpatient services.
